A GOOD WAY TO RAISE MONEY

As the mayor, Dr. Boyd, remarked at the last town council meeting, a high tax rate is a bad advertisement for a town hoping for new citizens and new industries. Fortunately, compared with most towns, Newmarket's rate is not high. Nevertheless, if it can be done without sacrificing important needs, it is a good thing to keep the rate low. Nevertheless, needs are needs, and if money doesn't come through the tax rate, it must come from the generosity of citizens. We like this idea of a tax on generosity. Like the income tax, it takes from those who have, but unlike the income tax it takes only from those who give gladly. Up in Orillia, for instance, where the tax rate is high, a newly organized parks board finds itself in need of funds. The logical source of money is the tax rate. But should the town council ask its industries, its unemployed home-owners and its poorly paid workmen to contribute toward the cost of beautifying the town and to pay the cost of establishing a motor camp (which is expected to carry itself after the initial outlay)? The proposal has been made that the parks board be started off with a "birthday present" of $1,200, to be donated by the town's well-to-do, generous citizens, and the proposal was no sooner made than the first $100 was offered.

RELIEF ALLOWANCE LOW?

We are becoming so used to the relief of unemployment that we have given up discussing two popular depression topics, first, the cause of unemployment, and second, the sufficiency of relief allowances. We have become hopeless about the unemployment problem and callous about relief. The Huntsville Forester discusses the subject very fairly. Stating that relief allowances are not sufficient to live on, the Forester says that they are intended only as an aid to supplement other income. The individual is supposed to do something for himself, but, says the Forester, this is often impossible. A minimum income of $25 a week, the Forester says, is needed to provide a balanced diet and the bare necessities of life for a family of five, yet the government allowance for food is only $6. "It is seldom possible," says the Forester, for the family to make up the difference. "The total on relief in Canada is estimated at close to one million. Back of this startling fact there is stark tragedy and hopeless despair. A million Canadians, underfed, inadequately clothed, uncomfortably housed. And the deplorable fact is that no immediate remedy is at hand." On the $25 a week basis for a family of five, many employed men should receive relief in addition to their wages, but they don't.

WHAT ARE YOUR SIX?

What are the six principal interests of mankind? Some might say war, sports, movies, love, bridge and money. Speaking at Midland, a Y.M.C.A. secretary from Toronto, Wm. R. Cook said: health, how to make and hold friends, how to make a living, to have a happy home life, to live in a good community, and to have and make good use of spare time. Incidentally, wouldn't it be nice if Newmarket, like Midland and Orillia, had a Y.M.C.A. to help our young people get the things they really want, sports that they can take part in themselves, healthful recreation and the other things Mr. Cook mentioned? And while we are dreaming, wouldn't it be nice to have a Y.W.C.A. too.

MUNICIPAL ECONOMY

The economy council over in Fergus has sold an almost new dump truck, purchased by the previous village council, to the town of Collingwood for $1,062.50, taking a considerable loss. There was little for the truck to do, and the village could not afford to own it, the council decided. The new council must be Hepburnites.

BROWN EGGS OR WHITE EGGS?

A Stouffville lady has missed attending the St. Lawrence market only two Saturdays in 39 years. We'd like to know how many eggs she has sold in that time. We'll put it this way, for the benefit of mathematicians and puzzle-solvers. Suppose she sells four and a half dozen eggs every Saturday except Saturdays it rains, when she sells a dozen eggs less. How many eggs has she sold in 39 years? This lady, Mrs. Erwin Gray, has made loads of friends, and is selling to grandchildren of some of her original customers. Incidentally, in his speech before the Good Roads Association, reported in last week's Era, Dr. L. W. Dales, Newmarket's reeve, told how York county had bargained with the city of Toronto, to give up toll-gates in return for free space at St. Lawrence market for York county farmers. Mrs. Gray, in an interview in the Stouffville Tribune, states that her father's name "is on the list of the North York farmers who signed to do away with the toll gates for free market space."

DON'T PAY, DON'T APPRECIATE

Stouffville village councillors don't agree with those mice who once wanted to tie a bell about the cat's neck. The council has asked the dominion railway board to have the bells removed from the wig-wag at the Main St. C.N.R. crossing. The council seems to think that the warning arm is sufficient. It seems that Stouffville has not had to pay any part of the installation cost, and doesn't have to pay any part of the maintenance, and that may be the trouble. Newmarket pays a share of the upkeep of the wig-wags in this town, and wants full value for her money, including bells.

WAR AGAINST SLOT-MACHINES

Newmarket is not alone in not encouraging slot-machines. The Amherstburg Echo takes the following information from the Simcoe Reformer, which has waged fearless war on slot-machines for a long time past. "The war against slot-machines is gradually being extended from one municipality to another throughout Ontario, says the Simcoe Reformer. In North Bay the municipal council has instructed the police to see that all slot-machines are removed from local places of business by March 1. In Cornwall a notice of motion has been presented to the council to rescind the existing by-law under which the devices were licensed at $50 a year. As the Cornwall Standard-Freeholder remarks: 'Slot-machines are undoubtedly a curse in any community.' They rob unwilling victims of thousands of dollars every year in every municipality in which they operate. Toronto police commission has drafted a by-law to submit to the city council to refuse licenses to stores harboring slot-machines. This is the most effective way of dealing with these illegal devices, and one that any self-respecting municipality will adopt."

THE CITY SLICKER

In Alliston a couple of weeks ago, a city bailiff sold out the contents of an Alliston hotel. He didn't know the rural mind, or the rural purse, or else he was very anxious to get back to his urban centre. He put the goods up in large lots and sold them without much difficulty. When the sale was all over, a local auctioneer had bought most of the goods. When the Toronto bailiff, acting for the public trustee, got through, the local auctioneer stepped up on the soap box and resold all he had bought, at a profit, but he sold individual pieces, not entire bedroom suites.

not meant to rest the eye or provide pleasure whenever one looked at them, which after all is the aim and end of pictures. And so, from all this, just as a palmist would read the lines of a hand, or a phrenologist the bumps on a head, I would read the characteristics of the inmates of a house.

Palmist and phrenologist make mistakes, so would "house-ologists" no doubt, but I'd read anyone quicker by their house than by their hand or head. Someone else might go into exactly the same houses that I did, and not having the same tastes, read an entirely different story. They might judge the housewife by the shining splendor of her floors, her silver and her window panes.

They might find her a wonderful artist in fancy work, and find kindness where I had missed it. It's a study, fascinating and delightful, and I have seen a house change just as the personality of its owner changed.

Try house reading—it's fun and it's educational too, for it may teach you where you lack yourself, and give incentive to further efforts to make your house a home.

TWO OLD-TIMERS RETURN TO TOWN

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"You've no idea how nice it is to have you with us again," Hattie Nuthatch said gaily to Rob Robin. "We winter birds were getting pretty bored with ourselves."

"Yes," agreed Cora Chickadee. "A few days ago, we were still in the doleful depths of winter, it seemed, and now, everything is changed."

"How do you mean, everything is changed?" inquired Rob.

"Well, for one thing, you're back," chirped Hattie coyly. "We've been waiting for you for days, you know."

"If you're not more careful with your flattery, I'll blush," said Rob. "To know that you two charming ladies have been waiting for me puts me into quite a dither," he teased.

"Now, don't misunderstand us, Rob," said Cora. "We will be just as glad to see Mrs. Rob when she comes. When will she be here?"

"I expect her in a day or two," said Rob. "She's with quite a large migrating party, and I'm not perfectly positive when they will get here. Of course, I had to come on ahead to stake a claim, from which to conduct my spring singing and choose a nesting site."

"Tell us about Mrs. Rob," urged Cora. "Did she have a nice winter in the south? Was there much social life there this winter? Did anything exciting happen?"

"We lost one of our last year's young ones about two months ago," answered Rob sadly. "Grown up as he was, practically a year old, he was caught by a prowling tom cat. The cat is certainly the Robin's worst enemy. I am determined that nothing like that will happen here in Newmarket this spring. Are there any cats around this particular spot, that you have noticed lately? I had thought of a nest somewhere around here if my wife likes it, but if there are cats here, I'll have to look elsewhere. Of course, we won't be nesting for a while yet."

"I haven't seen any around here lately," said Hattie. "Although there are plenty of them in town." "Hello, girls and boys!" said Mrs. Pecker, the Downy Woodpecker, arriving on the scene. "Cora and Hattie, remember that you promised me that you would come out to the woods today, to help me find my cousin, the Yellow-bellied Sapsucker. Let's start right away, while we can enjoy the sunshine."

"All right," the others agreed and they said good-bye to Rob and flew off.

"This is a wild goose chase," said Cora, after they had gone a little way. "The Sapsucker won't be here for a couple of weeks yet."

It's too early to expect to find him. I'm surprised that Pecker didn't tell you that it is too early for Sappy."

"As a matter of fact, he did suggest that this was only March 17, and that Sappy isn't usually here until early April. However, it's such a nice day that I thought that that would be a good excuse to get out for a bit of a hike."

"Oh, well, we don't mind. I'm sure," admitted Cora. "I thought your sudden interest in your rather disgraceful cousin was odd. Does Sappy realize, do you suppose, how much harm he does the trees by girdling them with holes for his sap-sucking?"

"He knows, don't you worry," said Mrs. Pecker. "he is just one of those devil-may-care fellows that doesn't give a hoot."

"Look there," called Hattie suddenly. "Who's that over by that fence post?"

"It's Boy Blue, the Bluebird," exclaimed Cora. "What a heavenly blue he is in the sunshine! So he's back too. How nice."

"The Bluebirds are so shy, a person hardly ever sees them any more," complained Mrs. Pecker. "We owe that to the Starlings and other bullying birds, like the English Sparrows. It's a shame."

"What I wouldn't give to have feathers the color of the Bluebirds," sighed Hattie enviously. "I just adore that shade of blue. I should think it would give them a cheerful disposition just to look like they do."

"You're not jealous, are you?" asked Cora. "I'll admit I am inclined to feel the same way. However, Mrs. Bluebird isn't as bright and beautiful as her husband is. I am very fortunate, I think, in being fully as good-looking as my husband. It seems to be very unfair that in so many cases, the lady birds are less beautifully dressed than the gentlemen. Why, that is true of even you two, Hattie, you haven't got the blue-black cap that Chubby has, but have to be content with a modest little grey cap."

"And Mrs. Pecker hasn't got that smart red patch on her bonnet that Mr. Pecker has," she concluded.

"If you're trying to be encouraging you're not succeeding very well," said Hattie crisply. "It doesn't do much good to tell us that we're not only not as beautiful as the Bluebirds, but we're not even as fortunate as you are in being as well-dressed as your husband. This doesn't seem to be one of your tactful days, Cora."

"No, I can see that my remarks were unfortunate," Cora agreed. "I guess I was just trying to cheer myself up at your expense, because, to tell you the truth, I'm wildly jealous of Blue Boy, too. And color is so important in spring fashions this year."

MRS. ELLI HAMBLETON DIPS IN 80TH YEAR

Almost to her 80th birthday, Mrs. Mary Hannah Brown Hambleton died a week ago Friday. She looked a stroke two years ago, and had been confined to her bed since last September. She was the widow of the late Ell Hambleton, who died in 1919.

Rev. Dr. W. S. Alexander conducted the funeral a week ago Monday. Interment was in Newmarket cemetery.

Born at Glenville, she was the daughter of Ann Wright and John Brown. She was married about 53 years ago. Her husband was a carpenter and a farmer. She has lived in Newmarket for 30 years.

There survive one son, Wilbert, four grandsons and four great-grandchildren.

The Return of the Swallow

To the Mission of San Juan

By Golden Glow

Ever since I first heard from friends in Los Angeles of the mysterious, unexplainable migration of the swallows of Mission San Juan, Capistrano, Cal., each year, exactly on the same day, year after year, for over 160 years, the event has always held a peculiar fascination for me. They return each spring on St. Joseph's Day, March 19. Perhaps you may recall me writing of their migration on Oct. 23, St. John's Day, saying, at that time, that only at Jerusalem, or other places in the Holy Land, were swallows similar to the San Juan swallows ever seen.

It has grown past the stage of tradition, it has been proved, time without number, that they never fail to appear and disappear each year on exactly the same day. On March 19 they come; on Oct. 23 they go!

At the mission lives an old Mexican; he has been there for more than 70 years. He is 85 now, but his mind is clear, and he dates his life experiences by the unfailing coming and going of the swallows. His name is Ramon Yorba, the mission sexton, and he says his grandfather could not remember when the swallows missed their schedule except under stress of unusually severe storms.

One legend says that each bird carries a long twig as a sort of "life raft," and that a sea captain has seen an entire flock come down and float on the water for a rest.

So next Saturday, March 19, the people of San Juan (which is Spanish for St. John, Oct. 23, the day the swallows migrate to winter quarters) will be watching for the mysterious return of the swallows, who will come straight in from the sea, just as when they go, they fly straight out to sea, on their mysterious flight.

The mission of San Juan is situated in a picturesque little valley, midway between Los Angeles and San Diego, and I keep wondering if the flood has wrecked the mission, the home of the swallows, and if so, where will they go?

Saturday night in the dead of night, or on towards Sunday morning, I was awakened by something I could not say what. So I lay quiet, and listened — and you'd never guess what I heard — something I have never heard before in my life — "The return of the crows." There were myriads of crows. They must have been coming back for the summer. The vanguard has been here several days — but it was the main body, no doubt, that I heard arriving, early Sunday morning. It was clear moonlight so they evidently had kept right on till they reached here. If anyone noticed on Sunday, as we did, crows were everywhere! And as no doubt you all know by now, the Robins, too, are back. The wild geese have been going over for the past few weeks.

Well, the signs can't all fall — and the calendar says spring officially arrives this coming weekend. So cheerio!

Tornadoes roared through the lower Mississippi valley on Tuesday, leaving a trail of death and destruction over five states. Seventeen persons were known dead and untold property damage was caused. The twister which struck in the boot-heel area of Missouri killed livestock and chickens by hundreds. Mules were stripped of their hair and chickens plucked as cleanly as if by hand.

An "air blast" caused a cave-in on the Teck Hughes gold mine near Kirkland Lake on Wednesday, and trapped four men. The tragedy occurred on the mine's 3,900 foot level. Mine officials declared there was no hope that any of the four had survived.

Several of Austria's eminent citizens prefer death, and committed suicide this week, following Hitler's coup of last week. It is reported from Vienna.

There was a drop in Toronto's coats and in the number of persons on relief during January and February, compared with the same two months last year, Welfare Commissioner A. W. Laver reported to the board of control.

From Hamilton comes the news that the 50-year-old murder of a Hamilton saloon-keeper has been brought to light. An aged town widow reported to police that her husband had confessed the crime on his death-bed. It had been buried up and made to look like suicide at the time, she said. The identity of the deceased man is being kept secret.

Russia and France have both given Czechoslovakia formal and official assurance that they will furnish military assistance in the event of aggression or interference from abroad, it was reported from Paris.

Provincial police have been called to the village of Hamilton to investigate an epidemic of dog poisoning. In the past four days the bodies of eight poisoned dogs have been found.

The Dorcas meeting was held last Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Bert Scott, when the ladies gathered for the regular meeting and finished a quilt. The ladies stayed and had tea together and the weekly prayer meeting was held in the evening.

Everyone was glad to see Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McGill and their two children out on Sunday.

Mr. Fred Knights, Mrs. S. Wight, also Marjorie and Dorothy Wight, motored to Thornhill to visit Mrs. J. Marritt and family on Sunday.

Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Armstrong had tea with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Scott on Sunday.

The community is sorry to see Rev. J. R. Armstrong and his wife leave, but he has been called to take charge of the Baptist church in Hespeler.

Misses Blanche and Grace Scott played the harp and guitar and sang last Sunday evening at the Mount Albert Baptist church hour.

Services will be as usual on Sunday, with Sunday-school at 1.45 p.m. and church at 2.45 p.m. A hearty welcome is extended to all.

Prayer meeting was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Knights.

NEWMARKET BADMINTON CLUB IS DEFEATED

Newmarket Badminton Club were defeated by the Barrie club on Wednesday evening of last week when the two clubs played at Barrie. The score in matches was 14-2 in favor of Barrie.

The Newmarket ladies were all defeated. In the men's doubles one game out of four was won by Newmarket, while they won one more in the mixed doubles.

CHARACTER IN HOUSES

We see so much in papers and magazines these days about reading character—diagrams by which you can read your own or someone else's hand; or maybe it's your head that's under consideration, or your handwriting. Be it which it may, each one is supposed to reveal something of the character of the devotee of that particular art.

But houses have always had a peculiar fascination for me, and it happens that I am in a strange locality and have an opportunity to visit some of the homes, it is just as exciting and interesting to read a home—to try and visualize the life lived there—as it is to read a new and entertaining book.

First I look to see if they are, as Anne Shirley would say, kindred spirits—tokens of this in my case—some signs of music life and lots of reading matter. Of course my household say, and I've no doubt my friends think, that I go to extremes in this matter of reading material—I must have what I want, when and where I want it at all times, yes, even if it's piled on the floor and oozing out of corners.

But anyway, even if every reader doesn't like his books and magazines quite so 'ad lib,' still if there's a reader or readers in the house, it will be evident. And with music the same! I'd rather see a mouth organ—excuse me—harmonica, lying round, showing that someone loved the tuncful art, than to see no evidence of a love for it.

Of course I've gone into a house where there were books, but they weren't friendly books—they sat haughtily behind their glass doors as much as to say—"this is our castle, we've been here for years, no one molests us, and we keep our coats spick and span." Very few of my books can say that. They've gone on little friendly journeys and their coats show that they are not for show alone, they have worked someone forget worry or sickness for awhile, or given some child pleasure, and maybe new thoughts of what a child can do and be.

And you've seen houses and so have I, where the piano didn't stand for music; it was an ornamental piece of furniture, and either stood with its mouth shut, or maybe open, and one piece of music, set exactly in the centre of the music rack, for all time to come. No little fingers laboriously pressed the keys, and no small face with knitted brows, or even a slightly extended tongue, poured over the intricacies of 1, 2, 3, and kindred mysteries.

POLICE COURT HIRED MAN SAYS HE BURNT BARN

A. J. Miller laid a charge of theft against Mrs. Alex. Locke, now of Toronto, last week. He had a conversation with Mrs. Locke and she promised to give back the articles, if he would withdraw the charge, which he tried to do, he said.

"Don't you know it is illegal to withdraw a charge?" questioned N. L. Mathews, K. C.

"No," answered Mr. Miller. Mr. Miller and Mr. Locke were both employees of the North York Hunt club and lived in adjoining houses. The Miller house was quite small and it was necessary to store some furniture, given to them for wedding presents and they stored it with the Lockes, according to the evidence.

The Lockes moved to Toronto, took the articles of furniture loaned for their use and didn't leave any address, Mr. Miller said.

After Mr. Miller located the Lockes, they said the furniture was of no particular value to them and that he could have it if he would withdraw the charge, he said.

Lorne C. Lee, Aurora, counsel for the defence, said that a verbal agreement for the use of the furniture was made early last summer and the Lockes could easily have asked for their furniture when they moved to the larger house.

"There is some misunderstanding about this case," stated Magistrate Woodliffe. "I will give the accused the benefit of the doubt and dismiss the case."

Christian Hansler pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a quantity of copper wire, the property of the town.

Constable James Sloss testified he was notified that some copper wire had disappeared from a box near the waterworks. The wire was in short pieces and had been left there by the electric light department. About 50 pounds were stolen and the value was nine cents a pound.

When he went to the house of the accused, Mr. Hansler admitted taking the wire but said he didn't see anything wrong with it, testified the constable. He took the officer to where the wire was hidden about one-quarter mile up the old railway track in some bushes.

Mr. Hansler was not represented by counsel and didn't testify on his own behalf.

He was remanded in custody for sentence for one week.

A charge of theft of a blow-torch, also against Christian Hansler was dismissed. John Moss had loaned his blow-torch to the Danforth Auto Wreckers. After the fire a young chap who had formerly worked there gave Mr. Hansler permission to take the torch. This man had no authority to give away the torch, Mr. Moss stated. He said there was no particular way in which he could identify his torch but that it was worth about $4.25.

With the consent of the crown, and of the complainant, Mrs. J. Sheard, a charge of converting to his own use, laid against Clarence Case, was withdrawn.

Mr. Mathews explained that Mr. Case took a cow to Toronto for Mrs. Sheard and didn't give her the proceeds of the sale that day, so she laid the charge. Then

Mr. Case settled everything up, and he asked that the charge be withdrawn.

Wm. Doyle, Toronto, pleaded not guilty to three charges laid against him. Mr. Doyle was without counsel and laid his own defence.

Wm. Snider, Schomberg Junction, testified the accused was driving south on Yonge St. He turned out to pass Doyle's car and Mr. Doyle swerved and took off his hub-cap. He followed Mr. Doyle's car and finally overtook him near Fleury's foundry, Aurora. Mr. Doyle paid for the hub-cap but was staggering and his breath smelt of alcohol, said the witness.

He admitted he had been drinking, Mr. Snider said. He didn't think it was safe for Mr. Doyle to drive, so he informed Constable Dunham.

Constable F. C. Dunham stated he found Doyle's car on Yonge St. parked in front of a restaurant. He waited until Doyle and Wm. Bentley came out, then he searched the car and found a bottle of wine, he said. He said he took Mr. Doyle over to Dr. C. R. Boulding for an examination, as he appeared under the influence.

Dr. Boulding testified that he made an examination of the accused and that he wouldn't say he was intoxicated but that he was not in a proper condition to drive.

Wm. Doyle testified he and Wm. Bentley had started out to Beaverton to buy some fish. They had two misfortunes with the car, so decided to turn back.

The second time they went into the ditch, a farmer and two other men pulled them out, he said. He offered them a drink and he and Bentley each had one. The wine made Doyle sick and he tried to stop in Newmarket at a restaurant but, he said, there were so many cars he couldn't find a place to park, so he had to go on. He stopped on Yonge St. for a while and just started up when he took off Snider's hub-cap. He admitted the wine was his but didn't remember seeing it after treating the men. He stated he was still sick when they took him over to the doctor's.

The magistrate dismissed the charge of driving under the influence of liquor.

On the charge of consuming an illegal place Mr. Doyle was fined $25 and costs or 30 days. He was given suspended sentence on a charge of reckless driving.

Wm. Bentley, 18, was given suspended sentence on a charge of consuming in an illegal place. The magistrate told him he was too young to drink liquor and to leave it alone.

Stewart Ruston was given suspended sentence on a charge of theft and ordered to make restitution within one week.

Mrs. B. M. Walsh, owner of a tea room, testified Mr. Ruston had been a customer at her store for some time. He was allowed to buy articles on credit. Last November he offered a cheque given to him by his father in payment for some goods, and asked for change for rest of cheque. Then he asked Mrs. Walsh for the cheque and promised to cash it for her and bring her the money, which he hadn't done, she said. He had given her some coal and money since then but she took that as payment on the other goods she said.

Mr. Ruston said he would pay her as soon as he gets some more trucking. He turned the cheque back to his father as he owed him some money for a tire, he said.

Harry Burtrand pleaded not guilty to a charge of setting fire to the barns owned by Chris. Hodgson, King township.

Mr. Hodgson testified he met the accused at the St. Lawrence market last December. He came along asking for work and later in the same day he hired Burtrand and instructed him about how to get to his farm near Nobleton. He was satisfied with the work done by Mr. Burtrand who, in turn, seemed satisfied with the place and work.

One day when Mr. Hodgson and his son, and Mr. Burtrand were in the bush working, the latter broke through the ice and got his foot wet, Mr. Hodgson testified. Mr. Hodgson sent him up to the house and told him to start the chores. The next day Burtrand remained in bed all day.

He had previously told Hodgson that he had been badly burned a few years ago and had spent some time in the hospital, where stitches were required to graft on some skin. He complained two or three times about these stitches and got time off to go to Toronto to see about them. That night he came down when the others were eating supper and later ate his supper with Mrs. Hodgson, the witness said.

Burtrand stayed in the house all evening and didn't help with the chores. About 9 p.m. Mr. Hodgson left the house with his daughter and niece. Before he left Burtrand asked him for some money as he wished to go to Toronto next day. Mr. Hodgson said he had already paid him too much and that he was not to leave until he had him examined by a doctor. Burtrand got angry when a doctor was mentioned and said he had his own doctor.

Later in the evening, Mr. Hodgson said he was notified to come home as his buildings were on fire. All his barns were burned, the entire last year's crop, and all the stock with the exception of four horses. Mr. Hodgson said he had never seen Burtrand smoke but knew nothing about his habits. Burtrand was just leaving the house with two grips when Mr. Hodgson got home. He told Burtrand he was not to leave and then phoned constable Farquhar and constable Sam Ireland.

Mrs. Hodgson testified that when Burtrand was getting ready for bed, he asked for some matches and was told they were in the usual place. He took some and then went upstairs after remarking he wasn't going to milk in the morning. About three quarters of an hour later, she said, he came downstairs and went outside. In about ten minutes he returned to the house and went upstairs again.

Then her daughter heard a noise and called "fire," so Mrs. Hodgson ran outside while her daughter put in the alarm. The whole barn seemed to be on fire but she managed to untie four of the horses and got them out. She tried to chase the sheep and young cattle from the barn-yard and then she saw Burtrand, who told her the barn was on fire, she said.

She went into the hen-house to let the hens out and Burtrand followed her and offered to help, but she told him she'd seen enough of him, she said.

The accused gave a voluntary story and was questioned at the county court building in the presence of W. E. Martindale and Carl W. Caskey of the fire marshal's office.

Carl W. Caskey, inspector in the fire marshal's department, read the statement in court. Burtrand admitted it was all true and said that he didn't wish to make any defence for himself. The magistrate found him guilty and remanded him for sentence one week in custody.

LOCAL MARKET

Prices at the local market on Saturday included eggs, grade A large, 22 to 25 cents per dozen. Butter was 37 and 38 cents per pound.

Chickens brought 20 cents per pound and old hens were selling at 20 cents per pound. Apples brought 20 cents per six quart basket.

Era printing prices are low.

SUTTON WEST BUSINESSMEN AND JUNIORS BATTLE

Sutton Businessmen defeated the local Junior O. H. A. team by a 5-4 score in the annual game at Sutton arena on Tuesday night in one of the most exciting and certainly the most amusing encounter of the entire season.

The Businessmen had a slight edge throughout the game and deserved their one-goal advantage.

After five minutes of play, the juniors finally beat Crozier in the net, when Bob Dunne passed to Huston in front of the net. The Businessmen put on a strong offensive and were finally rewarded for their sterling efforts when Murray Stokes picked up a rebound to make the score 1-1. A few minutes later Harvey Taylor, pivot man, gave Murray Stokes a perfect pass on which he made no mistake, making the count read 2-1. In the dying moments of the game, Ern Prosser, who replaced Crozier in the net, he being injured during a scramble, lifted the puck from one end of the ice to the other. Harvey Taylor picked up the puck to make the score 3-1 as the canto ended.

The second period was a close-checking affair, with sticks flying high and elbows, hips and knees being used freely. The juniors rained shots on Prosser, who turned in a fine performance, and were rewarded when they banged one in when the defence failed to clear.

Roger Hiscott took a pass from Henry Thompson just inside the blue line, to make the score 4-2 as the period ended.

As the final canto got under way, Art Snodden wove his way through to score unassisted for the last third goal. Two minutes later the "All-Stars" made it 5-3, when Harvey Taylor took a pass from Aub. Timmins in front of the net. The juniors put on a last desperate effort to try and tie the speedy Businessmen and were partially successful when Cooke and Burnham combined for the juniors' last goal, as the game ended 5-4.

The Businessmen were without the services of Frank Kaiser, Jim Trehear and Dooley Stiles.

The teams were—Sutton Juniors: (O.H.A.) goal, "Dusty" Pivnick; defence, "Bud" Gilbey and C. Fairbairn; centre, Geo. Cooke; wings, Burnham and Snodden; subs, Bob Dunne, Roy Huston, Clayton Brady.

Businessmen—"All-Stars": goal, Crozier, replaced by Ern Prosser in 2nd; defence, Stan. Cook and Len Burch; centre, Harvey Taylor; wings, Gar. Hamilton and Murray Stokes; subs, Geo. Lake, Roger Hiscott, "Puss" Lonergan, Dick Lonergan, Aub. Timmins, Henry Thompson, Jack Schmidt. Referee: Cec. Carpentier.

SUTTON MRS. T. HUNTLEY TAKEN BY DEATH

Mrs. Thomas W. Huntley, 76, passed away at her home two miles west of Sutton on Tuesday morning, following an illness of a few weeks. Mrs. Huntley, the former Martha Sennett, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sennett, lived with her husband on a farm until the time of her death.

A private funeral is being held at her late home on Thursday afternoon, with interment at Queensville cemetery.

Mrs. Geo. Timmins, Miss Helen Tranter and Mr. Aubrey Timmins, motored to Orillia on Sunday to attend a party held in honor of Mrs. Timmins' mother, Mrs. Hepinstall, on the occasion of her 81st birthday. The diamond wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John Jackson was also attended.

Misses Pearl Ward and Ruth Silver attended the opera presented by McMaster University, while spending the weekend in Hamilton.

Mr. Les Pickles spent the weekend at his home in London. Miss Muriel Cockburn spent the weekend in Toronto, attending the skating carnival at the Maple Leaf Gardens.

Miss Babe McKelvey, who was operated on at Wellesley hospital, Toronto, on Tuesday, is progressing favorably.

Mrs. Horman Stiles, Miss Clara Timmins, Mr. and Mrs. Reg Cook and Mr. Dooley Stiles, motored to Hamilton on Tuesday, where the latter attended a sales convention of an implement company.

Miss Ruby Culverwell spent Friday in Toronto.

TORONTO MARKETS

Prices on the Toronto markets on Tuesday included grade A large eggs, cases returned basis, 21 cents per dozen. Creamery butter prints, no. 1, were 37 cents per pound to the retail trade.

Cattle prices were steady to strong in active trading. Medium to good weighty steers sold at $5 to $6. Good butcher steers and heifers brought $5.25 to $5.50 with common as low as $4.25. Choice veal calves were priced at $9 to $9.50. Off-track bacon hogs closed at $9.50 to $10.

SUTTON WEST DECIDE PRESS IS MORE POWERFUL

The regular meeting of the local Young People's Union was held in the United church hall on Tuesday evening, with Convenor Mrs. L. Pike in charge.

The debate, "Resolved that the radio exerts more influence upon public opinion than does the press," was debated by Chas. Buckley and Marg. Warren on the affirmative side, against John Noble and Gladys Burnham. The decision of the judges, L. Pickles, Mrs. Buckley and Rev. N. S. Anderson, was in favor of the negative side, supporting the press. A sing-song was among the various items on the program.

Next Tuesday the local Y. P. U. visit Queensville, where they will participate in the program of the evening.

Keswick

Rev. C. E. Fockler conducted both services at the United church on Sunday.

Announcement is made that on Friday evening at 7.30, Mr. Fockler will commence a series of communicants' training classes. These classes are open to anyone who wishes to unite with the church either now or at a later date.

On Saturday afternoon in the Keswick United church a beautifully impressive service was held when the C.G.I.T., whose leaders are Mrs. F. Marriott and Mrs. R. Fisher, was affiliated with the Women's Missionary Society. Miss Margaret Fockler officiated, while Mrs. Vaughan represented the local society. Miss Joy Marriott had charge of the music. Among the girls, Helen Rye, Doris McGenerty and Eula Pollock had particular parts. Several mothers were present and other ladies of the congregation.

Everyone is asked to keep the evening of April 7 free to attend the supper at the United church, and also to enjoy the fine program that is being arranged for Mr. and Mrs. Davidson are in charge. A play, "The Smith family," is being prepared and there will also be out-of-town talent. A good time is promised all.

Mrs. McGenerty, secretary of the supply department of the W.M.S., asks any of the women who have used clothing suitable for making into boys' wearing apparel, to lay them to one side until some day in the very near future when she is planning a quilting and sewing meeting for the bales.

The Y.P.S. meets at 8 o'clock on Friday evening. Quite a number of the young people attended the meeting at Mount Albert on Monday evening.

Rev. Mr. Fockler and Miss Margaret Fockler attended the camp re-union at Markham on Tuesday evening.

The main social event for the ladies of the church this week is the apron shower at Mrs. Harry Babb's home. Those who were present last year, and who had such a pleasant time, are eagerly looking forward to another lovely afternoon spent with a most gracious couple.

Miss Helen Smith visited in Toronto this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Knights were up at their cottage over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. John Morton entertained friends and relatives on Sunday.

Mr. Bill Draper has been laid up with an abscessed knee. His friends are glad to know that he is doing well.

Mrs. Roy Pollock, who last Tuesday was rushed to York County hospital for an operation, is doing as well as can be expected. Better news is hoped for next week.

Miss Joyce Sanderson of Newmarket was a guest over the weekend of Mrs. Ross Folkard. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Brown moved to the Pollock farm last week. Their many neighbors showed by helping in the moving in how much esteem they were held. They will be greatly missed.

Mrs. Wm. Winch of Belhaven, who has been very ill, is still with her sister in Toronto.

The return of the crows is music to those who are looking forward to spring. Some have already seen robins.

from the taxes of N. Pearson for weed-cutting and $1.40 from A. E. Sheppard's far weed-cutting. All relief will be discontinued after April 1 by order of the council. Reeve Ernest Morton and Deputy Reeve R. A. Davidson were authorized to purchase the right-of-way from the south town-line to the east town-line for the extension of the proposed highway.

The following accounts were paid: J. H. Harper, stamps, clerk, $5; H. Taylor, funeral expenses, $75; Dr. F. G. Plim, medical services, $20; P. W. Mahoney, road insurance, $181.65; Hydro-Electric, $9.84; York County hospitalization, $6.12; James Stevenson, stamps, treasurer, $6; Carl Morton as constable, $48; W. E. Newmarket's Telephone System on March 23rd at 2 p.m.

Newmarket's telephone service will be changed to common battery operation at 2 p. m. next WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23rd. After that time telephone users will reach the operator merely by lifting the receiver off the hook. The hand ringer should not be used after the change.

Immediately following the change on the afternoon of the 23rd, our installation staff will begin visiting subscribers' premises to install the new type common battery telephones.

While the Central Office equipment and operating force are adequate to the needs of Newmarket telephone users for some time to come, we would suggest that for the first few days after the change subscribers limit their calls to those which they would ordinarily make. This will give the operators time to become familiar with the new equipment.

Your cooperation will be appreciated.

Rose—In loving memory of our dear father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Rose, who passed away March 15, 1937 and August 9, 1936.

Gone are the faces we loved so dear,
Silent are the voices we loved to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for the thought to reach.
Sweet to remember them who once were here
And who, though absent, are just as dear.
Ever remembered and sadly missed by the family.

GOLD COAST MISSIONARY WILL VISIT PARENTS HERE

Major and Mrs. Arthur Ashby, missionaries for the Salvation Army on the Gold Coast, central Africa, are returning to Canada shortly. They will be visiting Major Ashby's parents in Newmarket, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ashby.

These missionaries will have a very fascinating story to tell of their work among the natives. They have spent about nine years in this work in Africa.

Engagements

The engagement is announced of Cleoda Bernice, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Watson, Ravenshoe, to James William, son of Mr. Robert Morris, Toronto. The marriage will take place quietly on April 6.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Pegg of Sutton West wish to announce the engagement of their second daughter, Frances Mary Alma, to Delbert George Graves, second son of Mr. Walter Graves and the late Mrs. Graves, the marriage to take place early in April.

ARE 51 YEARS WED

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Moss will mark their 51st wedding anniversary on March 28, not their 61st as stated last week.

ARE MARRIED IN FRIENDS CHURCH

A beautiful spring wedding was solemnized on Saturday afternoon in the Friends Meeting House, when Hazel Edith Triller of Galt, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fisher, Hamilton, was united in marriage to Harold S. Loker of Galt, son of Mrs. Loker and the late Mr. Hiram Loker. Rev. Burton Hill was the officiating minister.

The bride was very attractive in a dress of royal blue triple sheer crepe with hat and shoes to match and white mesh gloves. She wore a corsage of tallianum roses. The attendants were Mrs. Burton Hill of Newmarket and Mr. Stirling Nelson of Guelph.

Later the couple left on a wedding trip to Toronto, St. Catharines and Buffalo, and on their return will take up residence in Galt. For travelling the bride chose a navy polka dot bolero jacket dress with black accessories.

A charmingly arranged reception was held on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Hiram Loker, Dundas St., Galt. The rooms were prettily decorated in pink and white, with the bride's cake centering the table. Friends were present from Preston and Galt.

Era printing is high-quality and low-cost.

Her friends are pleased to see Mrs. Ralph Draper around and able to be out again after her long and serious illness.

Mrs. Selby Sedore and Mrs. Fred Lockerbie entertained a number of the ladies at Mrs. Sedore's on Wednesday afternoon to progressive euchre. Prizes were won by Mrs. A. Sedore, and Mrs. C. Anderson. A very dainty tea was served and a very enjoyable afternoon was spent by all.

Mrs. Roy Pollock is seriously ill in York county hospital and her friends hope for a very speedy recovery for her.

Miss Evelyn Wright, Miss Helen Hamilton, Mr. Byron King and Mr. Harold Walden, spent Sunday in Toronto with Mr. and Mrs. S. Harmon.

Builder Gets Big Contract; Employment Hopes Brighten

Eaton Hall Farm Residence
Will Mean Work For Many

Hope of employment, at a time when work is hard to find, has come to a goodly number of workmen in Aurora and district, when it was learned that a large building contract has been secured by the Aurora Building Company.

The contract covers the building of a large home on the Eaton Hall farm, and work began this week when a dozen men, in eight trucks, went out on Tuesday morning to begin work on a mile-long road, preliminary to construction of the house.

"The work should mean a good deal to the men in Aurora," Fred Browning told The Era on Tuesday. Work on the new home would continue for well over a year, he intimated. A good deal of steel joisting and stonework will be used in the construction. Since the fire at the farm last year, considerable work has been done on the property by the local building company. The work of clearing away the old barns was followed by a contract for building a new one. That finished, construction has commenced on a home. The latest contract involves some $75,000, it is stated.

Parry Sound Ties Game At 4-4 But Locals Take Series, 13-9

Packed Arena Thrilled At Visitors' Come-Back Attempts

Hockey fans jammed Aurora's hockey factory on Thursday night to witness Parry Sound's effort to wipe out the 9-5 defeat handed them by the Jubilees earlier in the week.

The visitors came within a goal of doing it at one stage of the game, only to have the Jubilees show greater staying power to regain their lead in the closing minutes and win the series, 13-9.

For the first ten minutes the Jubilees appeared to be the better team and most of the play was in the opposition territory. Powell, in the Parry Sound goal, seemed hung with horseshoes, however, and the Sounders, rallying, began to show to better advantage.

Anderson, fast-skating wingman, gave the visitors a start when he capitalized on a nice combination play to score at the end of the first period.

Then Anderson scored again to make it 2-0 in the first minute of the second session, to begin a period of headaches for the local supporters.

Everything the Jubilees did went wrong. Passes went straight to the visitors' sticks, checks were over-skated and in general, the home-town gang gave a perfect exhibition of a team having an off-night.

Johnston tallied when the locals were a man short, and fans were breathless when they realized that the Parry Sound team was within one goal of tying the series.

Wrightman broke the jinx for the Jubilees, however, and the team went into the final period in a little better shape. Even when Wilson went off on a trip the locals more than held their own. Then Mair was rewarded for his fine play with a nice goal. Anderson tucked in his third goal of the night on a beautiful play, but the visitors began to falter in their attack, and looked a badly tired team. They sent every man up the ice on several occasions but were successfully turned back by Tunney and heads-up defensive work on the part of James, Bone and Ferguson.

With four minutes to go the Aurora attack finally began to click and Wilson and Wrightman earned a goal each to tie the score.

The play was exceptionally clean throughout, and the visitors, who might have been expected to "let loose" in the dying moments of the game, deserve special credit for their sportsmanship.

The fine passing attack of the Parry Sound team would spell trouble for the best junior squad in the province, and the locals had their hands full.

Both teams had a goal disallowed, with Aurora suffering most from penalties in a well-refereed game.

Teams—Parry Sound: goal, Powell; defence, Forbes, Brown; centre, Johnston; wings, Anderson, McKwan; alternates, Depew, Demkiew, Fisher, McCallum.

Aurora: goal, Tunney; defence, James, Bone, Ferguson; centre, Wilson; wings, Wrightman, Mair; alternates, Collings, McComb, Graham, Preston; sub-goal, Doo-little.

ABOUT TOWN

REPORTING

Once upon a time, long ago, a reporter used to amount to something. He drove one of the fastest horses in town, wore the highest collar and yellowest of shoes, called himself a journalist and was sometimes credited with mousing public opinion.

But that was long ago. Public opinion today looks for guidance in the philosophies of Charlie McCarthy, Mickey Mouse and Popeye the sailor. And reporters sell for a dime a dozen and have a social rating two notches below a radio license inspector.

Perhaps the public is right. Prudence compels us to admit that the customer is never wrong. We're not complaining. Don't get the idea that we're peeved about it . . . not at all!

The above is written simply as a prologue to our statement that reporting "ain't" what it used to be.

Nowadays the reporter no longer reports only what he thinks is important. He tries to discover what the public thinks is important . . . and he writes about that. Or he looks for another job.

Readers today look for the "interesting" things in a paper. The man who walks down Yonge St., clad only in a barrel, has much more news interest, in the opinion of Mr. and Mrs. John Public, than has the man who built Yonge St.

Which may explain why a report of the Aurora council appearing on this page, received the treatment it did last week. The importance of the story was that it showed the economical administration of the town's relief department. The interest in the story lay in a discussion of whether an item of "peanuts" appearing on a relief purchase, should be approved.

It was the "peanut" part of the story to which we gave most prominence, and it was because of this, we suppose, that the story . . . which had appeared in this paper only . . . was given further prominence in a radio broadcast on Saturday morning.

One of the reporter's few privileges is that of reporting on matters of government and if by so doing he can increase public interest in matters of public concern, then the job is not without its compensations.

The decisions made by your town council are both important and interesting. They merit your attention. They are reported upon, fully and accurately, in The Era . . . and, we hope, interestingly.

A.Y.P.A. Enjoys Varied Program

Motion pictures of the coronation procession formed the feature of the entertainment sponsored by the A.Y.P.A. in the parish hall last Thursday evening.

London, England; Peiping, China; and Trinidad were the subjects of three travelogues shown.

Between reels, piano solos by Constance Willis and Homer Neilly, vocal solos by Mrs. B. Harrison, Bob Turp and Reg Southwood, a piano duet by Mr. and Mrs. B. Harrison, and a skit by Reg Southwood, Don Glass and Reg Eades, provided entertainment.

Changes In Beverage Room Hours Voted By W.C.T.U.

New Member Welcomed At Meeting of Local Society

Added interest was given to the monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. held in the United church parlors on Tuesday afternoon, by reports given by Mrs. Silas Stephens and Mrs. Arthur Atkinson on the recently-held convention in Trinity church, Toronto.

Mrs. R. J. Neilly was welcomed as a new member of the W.C.T.U. and received her pledge card.

In the president's address at the convention, Mrs. Stephens reported, it has been pointed out that liquor could be purchased during 54 hours of the week in Great Britain, as compared with 24 hours in Ontario. The drinking of alcohol was a public and private sin, the president had stated.

Thanks were sent from the convention to the Canadian broadcasting commission, expressing appreciation of the curtailment of liquor advertising over the radio.

Strong objections to scenes in the motion pictures which showed liquor being drunk, were also expressed at the convention, it was reported.

Young people were more interested in temperance today than they were a few years ago, it was stated at the convention.

Three Celebrate Birthdays At High School Dance

A three-way tie for first place in the birthday dance, one of the surprise events in the high school St. Patrick's dance held in the school assembly hall on Friday, caused amusement for the dancers, but consternation to the management.

Misses Mae Fry, Helen Burnett and Pat Siman all recalled that March 13 was the day on which they had first said hello to the world. The problem was finally solved by dividing the

Ballantrae Brings "Imports" To Final; Tilt Declared Exhibition

Hulme and Helmky Shine
Though Mount Pisgah
Loses By 5-0

Making use of members of the Marlboro juniors as a foundation for their team, Ballantrae journeyed to Stouffville on Monday night, determined to win the championship of the Young People's hockey league.

Although they conceded that it would be a great honor to play against the highly touted Toronto boys, Mount Pisgah, Ballantrae's opposition in the finals, refused to throw away their championship chances for such a motive.

After some wrangling, the league executive decided to divide 60 per cent of the play-off money evenly between Mount Pisgah and Ballantrae. Pine Orchard and Sixth Line, the other two teams making the play-offs, each received 20 per cent of the pot.

With these matters settled, the teams met in an exhibition game before the biggest crowd of the season.

Ballantrae, with the aid of Drummond, Heeneey and three more Marlboros, beat out Mount Pisgah, 5-0. Fred Hulme played spectacularly in the Mount Pisgah net and Johnny Helmky played a rugged defence against the Ballantrae attack.

Y.P.U. Is Host To Other Groups

Spring is in the offing! On Monday evening of last week, at their regular Young People's meeting, the Y. P. U. of King City United church entertained other young people's groups.

Alex Sims of the University of Toronto gave his experiences on a trans-Canada trip last year.

Groups of young people were present from Eversley, Laskey, Weston and Temperanceville, also from the Baptist and Anglican groups in King City. It was a worth-while occasion and thanks

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE PLAN SPECIAL PROGRAM

The young people's group of the Baptist church will be entertained by an illustrated lecture at their regular meeting next Monday evening. The lecture, which will deal with the work done by the B.Y.P.U., will be given by Harold Watson of Toronto.

The abolition of wine shops was advocated, Mrs. Atkinson reported. Beverage rooms, it was stated in a resolution, should close at 10 p.m. on week-days and at 1 p.m. on Saturdays. The use of standard time in closing hours was advocated.

The single purchase permit system should be abolished, the convention felt, and permits should cover purchases of beer and wine.

During the business part of the meeting, it was decided to send fruit to Mrs. Chas. Bilbrough, who, it was stated, had been ill for the past month. Mrs. Bilbrough was commended for her fine work in the temperance cause.

Both delegates to the convention refused to have their expenses paid by the society, asking that it be considered a contribution to the order. Mrs. Charles and Mrs. Deering moved a hearty vote of thanks to the delegates.

prize into three portions and presenting one to each of the fortunate young ladies.

Miss Christine Kirkwood and David Naylor found themselves "on the spot" in the lucky spot dance. They immediately earned their prize, when it was presented to them, with a whirling solo across the floor.

A goodly crowd from the town and district attended and all reported a much-enjoyed evening. Max Boag's orchestra supplied the music.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wheeler and family of Toronto spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Johnson.

Mrs. D. Wilcox is visiting her mother, who is ill.

Members of the staff of the T. Sisman Shoe Co. attended a semi-annual "at home" in Toronto on Wednesday evening.

Several young people attended the camp reunion at Markham on Tuesday evening.

SCHOOL NOTES

By JOHN CRYSDALE, JR.
PLAYOFF CHANCES

The public school seniors have a grand chance to lick the group teams and take the title. In the last ten games, (not including the tournament) the public schoolers, out of ten games, won six, tied one and lost three.

Maple-Hope has lost two games to the locals, 5-0 and 4-0, so that they're not dangerous.

The pucksters from Richmond Hill have won two and lost two but the Aurorans nosed them out in the fifth game during the tournament down south. The scorers were: first game Richmond Hill, 4, and Aurora 2; the tables were turned in the next game when Aurora blanked the Hillers 3-0.

In the third game the Richmond Hill seniors took the game by the small score of 1-0. In the fourth game the Aurora seniors trounced Richmond Hill 3-0. The Aurora team took eight goals to the Hill's five. The battle ended though, when the locals trounced Richmond Hill 4-2.

Things are about even with De la Salle, although the local seniors have had the advantage of goals. De la Salle blanked Aurora 2-1, then the score was tied 4-4 and then the locals showed the College boys the dressing room with a score of 3-0. Altogether it doesn't look too bad.

Jubilees Grab 4-4 Tie In First Semi-Final

Locals Fail To Show True Form Until Last Period Attack

SECOND STRING SHINES

Showing to disadvantage on the soft ice, Aurora's contenders for "C" championship honors needed all the force of a last minute attack to catch a tie from the fast-skating Lindsay squad on Monday night.

A near-record crowd piled in the local arena to see the Jubilees take an early lead, lose it, and even up on a last minute push that kept the fans on their feet for the last period of the game.

A fast-breaking Lindsay attack broke away from the local checks on numerous occasions and on three of the four goals scored by the visitors, Net-minder Tunney had no chance. On one goal he was out-guessed.

The second line took honors and Preston, new member of the threesome, scored on a beautiful Collings-McComb-Preston rush that brought the only tally of the first period. Lindsay's goaler robbed the locals of "sure" goals on a number of occasions in this session.

The middle period belonged to the visitors, and they made use of it to count twice. The first goal came from Dart, the second on an English-Brennan effort, and both were scored when the Jubilee defense was lost in the crowd at the other end of the rink.

School Outscores Third Form In Basketball Challenge Tilt

Lloyd Accounts For Half Of Team's Points On Local Gym Floor

An impertinent, defiant challenge hurled from the depths of the third form to the rest of the school, resulted in a closely-fought basketball game at the high school on Monday. Picking up the gauntlet figuratively tossed at their feet, the school beat out the third formers by the slim margin of 14-12.

Teasdale opened the scoring for the school with a basket from close in. Bill Walker tossed in a free shot for third form. Then Ken Davis scored for the school to put them three up. The first quarter ended after third form had made three more points to tie the score.

The second quarter was equally close. Blythe opened with a beautiful shot from centre. Lloyd tied it up for third. Armstrong and Walker scored on free shots and Sheridan tallied one for the school to leave the half-time score at 8-8.

Third form outscored the opposition 2-1 in the third quarter with two free shots. As the final chapter commenced, the school was one point down. Then Westcott scored from the corner and Holikka dropped a long one, following it with a successful free throw. In the last minutes, Lloyd brought third form's score to 12 points, having tallied six himself. Holikka and Westcott led the school scoring with three points each.

Teams—Third form: Walker, Lloyd, Kyle, Follitt, Wilcox, Armstrong, Jennings.

School: Teasdale, K. Davis, Westcott, Blythe, Holikka, Kerr, Billings, Sheridan.

Orchestra Will Play At Church

The 15-piece orchestra of Newmarket's Trinity church will be heard at the Aurora United church on Sunday evening.

The program will include selections from Tannhauser, the Andante from the Surprise Symphony by Haydn, and the Andante Cantabile from the First Symphony of Beethoven. There will be a violin duet by Bruce Black and Harold Rutledge, a violin quartet by Sam Catania, George Morris, David Ferguson and Francis Cook and a cornet solo by Jack Arkitt.

FALSE ALARM SENDS BRIGADE TO MAPLE ST.

A false alarm gave the fire brigade a chance to exercise the truck on Monday afternoon. The alarm took them to Maple St., but their services were not needed.

More Aurora news will be found on page 6.

IS MADE MEMBER OF PRESBYTERIAN BOARD

John T. Bond, who has recently moved back to Aurora, was elected a member of the board of management of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. The number of those on the board has been reduced from seven to six.

Collings got credit on the referee's sheet for the lone Jubilee goal in this session and certainly deserved it on his fine play.

James had to leave the ice with a gashed eye, the third Aurora man to have to leave the ice with eye trouble. Butt-ends evidently come high in Lindsay.

Fine checking and rushing by Trevor Graham studded the play throughout the night, and both Ferguson and Bone looked good.

James came back with a fine rush in the third period and the first line of Wilson, Wrightman and Mair ranged inside the enemy territory time after time, to be beaten by the goalie.

Finally Wilson and Mair trapped the puck in a Lindsay corner and placed it beautifully in front of the net, where James poked it in. Another Jubilee goal tied the score and the end of the period found the play all inside the Lindsay territory.

92 YEARS OLD - AND FIT AS A FIDDLE*Takes Kruschen Every Morning

"I feel in duty bound," writes Mrs. A. J. W., "to express my gratitude for the marvellous results my father has obtained from Kruschen Salts. He is ninety-two years old, and is as fit as a fiddle. He can get around easily, and even run up and down stairs. His friends marvel why it is he is always alert, and never feels listless. He always tells them the reason: 'my regular daily dose of Kruschen Salts in my first cup of tea every morning'."—(Mrs. A. J. W.)

Most people grow old long before their time because they neglect one vital need of health—the need for internal cleanliness. Eventually they start the healthy Kruschen habit. Then, probably for the first time in their lives, they start getting rid every day of all waste matter from the system. Instead of being clogged, the intestines are clean and clear. Instead of liver and kidneys being sluggish, they are active and efficient. New, healthy blood goes coursing through the veins—carrying health and strength and energy to every part of the body.

ZEPHYR
LANTERN LECTURE
GIVEN ON INDIA

The second of a series of Lantern sermons was given at Zephyr United church on Sunday, the topic being "The more abundant life."

"What is life? Is the eternal question and we sometimes try to answer it in terms of every day experiences," said Mr. Murray.

"In one sense that is true, but life is more than that. We look at it from a material standpoint, but the 'life is more than meat and the body than raiment.'"

"Fundamentally life is spiritual, it has to do with the soul, the personality, what we are in ourselves. We are trying to find life or satisfaction in the affairs of this life, which is only natural.
We may find happiness or otherwise in them, but we can never find life. Jesus said 'I am come that ye might have life and that ye might have it more abundantly.' Christ came to redeem us to life and only as we surrender to him can we obtain the more abundant life."

Mr. Hugh Arnold and a friend,
Mr. Mel Acres of Peterboro, were at the former's home on Sunday.

Miss Mabel Pickering spent the weekend in Uxbridge with her sister, Mrs. H. Peers.

The snow has about all disappeared and it looks as though spring will soon be here.

There will be another dance in the community hall on Wednesday, March 23. Catania's orchestra will provide music. Everyone is invited to come and enjoy the evening.

The W.M.B. held a social evening in the Sunday-school room last Wednesday evening, March 9. A lantern lecture on "India on the march," given by Mrs. A.
Armstrong, also music and a social cup of tea, made a very pleasant evening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rynard entertained a few of their friends on Monday evening of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Horner and Mrs. Horner's aunt of Winnipeg, are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Horner this week.

Some from here attended the double-header hockey match in the Maple Leaf gardens on Saturday last.

Ashworth

The Ladies' Association of Ashworth United church held a very interesting social evening on March 8. The program was presided over by Rev. Geo. Murray, who made reference to it being the first time that the newly installed electric lights had been used. There were readings, recitations and songs, provided by local talent, which were much appreciated.

A lantern lecture on "India on the march," with beautifully colored slides were given. These gave an insight into the splendid work which the missionaries are doing. During the evening missionary hymns were sung. Lunch was served at the close.

THE OSTREKOFF JEWELS

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

A GREAT NOVEL OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

INSTALMENT 9

Synopsis

Wilfred Haven and Anna Kastellane are surrounded by spies and plotters in wartime Warsaw. Their enemies are endeavoring to gain possession of the Ostrekoff jewels, worth millions. The jewels were entrusted to the American diplomat for delivery to Princess Elisaveta Ostrekoff in London, as her inheritance from parents, condemned to death by Red usurpers.

Haven finds Anna Kastellane, whom he rescued from a Petrograd mob, a millstone about his neck. The beautiful Russian insists on accompanying him. Doubts assail him whether she is an adventuress, a spy or the beautiful character he wishes her to be.

Polish army officials would like to gain possession of the jewels, but Haven's diplomatic immunity and his intrepidity enable him to outwit them.

Impenetrable Barriers

At 6 o'clock on the following evening, Wilfred Haven, with his satchel under his arm, entered the bar of the hotel and flung himself into the nearest easy-chair. Fred lifted the flap of his counter and crossed the floor toward his compatriot.

"What's the trouble?" the man inquired. "Don't you like this city?"

"I'd like it better if I could get out of it," was the gloomy reply. The barman nodded sympathetically.

"That's surely a little difficult just now," he acknowledged. He busied himself behind the counter and returned in a few moments with a foaming tumbler. Haven sampled the concoction and approved.

"Say, we've got our own people here, haven't we?" the barman continued. "Consultate, legation, and all that sort of thing—right up to date. You're some sort of official, aren't you? You ought not to be in trouble."

"Yes, they're here, all right, but I'm afraid I didn't make much of a hit with them," Haven explained, a little ruefully. "However, that couldn't be helped. As for the banks, they seem to be terrified of parting with money."

"Got what you wanted, I hope?" Fred inquired.

"Got enough to be going on with. You don't happen to have such a thing as an atlas, I suppose?"

"There's one in the reading room, I reckon," the barman replied. "You stay where you are and I'll fetch it right away."

Jealousy or Fear?

He departed on his errand. Watching him idly as he crossed the hall, Haven's attention was suddenly arrested by the sight of two figures—a man and a woman—talking together in a corner of the Palm Court. The girl he recognized at once as Anna Kastellane. The man was the cadaverous-looking individual whom he had seen lounging in the bar on the previous evening. They were conversing with the confidence of intimates and Haven was conscious of a queer little sensation of uneasiness. He watched them, frowning. Such a sensation as jealousy seemed ridiculous, yet he realized in those few seconds that, notwithstanding his intense preoccupation in his own enterprise, he was capable of a subconscious sentiment which as yet he had not paused to analyze. Presently, as though with reluctance, she drew away. He saw her, half turned from him, motion the man to depart. She came across the hall very slowly and apparently deep in thought. Acting upon another impulse, which he did not recognize, Haven changed his seat. He made his way to the bar counter, glass in hand, and climbed on to one of the stools. Presently he heard his name called out softly. She was standing in the doorway of the room.

"At last!" she exclaimed. "I thought that you were lost."

He descended from his stool and turned toward her.

"I haven't exactly been lost," he confessed, "but I haven't had much of a day. My people gave me lunch, but they weren't very helpful."

"Considering that your dispatch case is stuffed with your private letters and your dispatches are meant for Paris or London," she observed, smiling, "it is scarcely likely that they would make great efforts for you."

"There's only a Charge d'Affaires here," he grunted. "It isn't his business to know what dispatches I'm carrying. I couldn't get any particular help—that's the great thing—nor as much money as I wanted for another. I'm going to work things out for myself if I can. Fred's gone to find an atlas for me. The trouble of it is they tell me that nearly all the motorcars in the place are commandeered and the railways are in military occupation."

Maps Are Immobility

The barman reappeared and very soon they were established in a corner with the atlas spread out between them.

"Will you look at that and tell me how I am to get anywhere?" he demanded bitterly. "The old frontiers are practically demolished, the civil trains aren't running within a hundred miles of the German or Austrian frontier. Rumania looks more hopeful, but no one seems to know what the Germans have done with the railway line running southward."

"You are such a restless person with those love-letters of yours," she mocked him gently. "Why not settle down here? It is a very agreeable hotel, there is some life still in the place, and here am I willing to do my best to amuse you."

"Too near Russia," he pointed out. "I don't like to think of what may be going to happen there. Besides, don't forget your old general last night. He wasn't exactly imbued with the spirit of hospitality, was he?"

"Did you go up to the barracks this morning?" she asked.

"I did not," he answered. "And believe me, I had very good reasons for staying away."

He closed the atlas with a slam. "I knew beforehand that it was not the slightest use your studying that," she told him. "There are hundreds of neutrals here already who cannot leave the place. Besides, if you could, it would be most ungallant to leave me here all alone—and unfeeling."

"My first duty," he persisted doggedly, "is to get myself to the other side of Europe safely. You're plenty of friends and you're a genuine Russian, not one of these revolutionaries whom the Poles are getting after."

"You said just now," she reminded him, "that we were too near Russia for your liking. Does not that apply to me, too? Can you not imagine that after the hell I have gone through even the sound of a Russian voice fills me with terror? If the Reds there overrun the country, they will make their way into Poland before long."

"All the people at the embassy declare that Poland will fight them if they do," he insisted. "Poland is monarchical in spirit, whatever her form of government may be."

The Clinging Beauty

"Anyway, I do not want to be left here," she declared. "You run no risk in taking me wherever you go."

"You're a strange creature," he observed. "How do I know that you're not a spy?"

"If I am, I am not spying on you," she rejoined.

"Show me your passport," he demanded abruptly.

She looked at him speculatively.

"Are you mistrusting me?" she asked.

"Not definitely. You're a mysterious young person, though. I find you in a very ordinary sort of house in Petrograd, you turn up here with a marvelous wardrobe of clothes, you seem to know all sorts of queer people. Your stories about yourself are not in the least convincing. There doesn't seem to be any reason for your existence or your presence here or anything."

"I find you extremely distracting and I'm afraid of you."

She leaned back in her chair and laughed. Her mirth appeared to be so genuine that tears actually came into her eyes.

"Please try to be polite instead of being silly," she enjoined. "I have sat here all this time and you have not even offered me a cocktail. Your nerves are all wrong. Two dry Martinis, please," she added, turning to the barman. "You can see my passport at dinner-time if you like. Will that do?"

"I suppose so. You are going to dine with me then?"

"Am I taking an invitation too much for granted?" she inquired.

"Not at all," he assured her. "I thought you might perhaps have been dining with some of your friends here."

"I have not yet seen any of them except General Grotzowicz," she confessed. "His little weakness is generally a supper party."

"Have you ever been to supper with him?" he asked bluntly.

"So far," she replied, "I have managed to escape it. Tonight, however, I feel an invitation is pending. The only thing is he may be too busy with his Council of War."

Haven scowled, took a cigarette from his pocket and tapped it on the table.

"You have another costume on today," he remarked, with a glance at her very neat dark green coat and skirt bordered with astrakhan.

"Is that forbidden?" she laughed. "I may be a spy, you know, and spies are always well dressed."

"I don't see where all your things come from."

"There are very good shops here," she told him.

"I'm not much of a judge, but that costume doesn't look ready-made."

"But you see I happen to be stock size. I waited an hour in the shop while they made one slight alteration in the skirt. I hope you like it."

"I like it and it suits you wonderfully," he assured her. "In fact," he went on, looking at her steadily, "I consider you're one of the most attractive young women I ever met in my life. I admire you far too much already, but I am beginning to be afraid of you."

Love or Intrigue

Again she laughed, though this time in more restrained fashion. She raised her glass and the corners of her lips quivered as she looked into his eyes.

"If you challenge me," she threatened. "I shall try to change that fear into some other feeling. It would be impossible? Yes?"

He was in a queer mood, for he spoke to her almost savagely.

"You shall try," he declared. "As soon as this accursed bracelet is off my wrist and I am a free man—you shall try then, if you want to—if you dare!"

"Of course, I shall dare! See how brave I am even now," she went on, suddenly caressing his hand. "Of course, I shall dare, dear Wilfred. I have known Englishmen with many strange names," she added reflectively, "Englishmen and Americans, but 'Wilfred' is new to me. Are you beginning to trust me a little more, Wilfred? Am I still to bring down my passport?"

"You are," he replied emphatically. "And don't forget it."

"You want to be quite sure that I am not an international thief or a political spy with fake medicines in my bag and a dagger in my stocking," she mocked him.

"Don't talk rubbish," he snapped. "I never suggested that there was anything so melodramatic about you."

"I want to be sure that I can trust you, that's all. If I find that I can't, I'm going to crawl out of this country somehow by myself, even if I never see you again."

His tone was perhaps a little more brusque than he had intended. She shrank away for a moment as though he had struck her, then she rose to her feet.

"I will see you down here before dinner," she suggested. "I think I can prove to you then that I have been thinking of you and your safety all day. I have a plan and if, after I have told you what it is, you still wish to mistrust me, you can do so, but in that case, we shall say good night and good-by."

She turned hastily toward the door and swept out of the room, leaving always the air of keeping her face concealed from him as though she wished to hide the tears in her eyes. As she crossed the lounge, he saw that she held her handkerchief, a crumpled wisp of cambric, between her fingers. He was certainly in a queer temper, for he struck the table with his fist so that his wine glass, with his untasted cocktail, fell crashing on to the floor. The incident did more than anything else toward restoring him to his normal self.

"Sorry, Fred," he apologized, looking across toward the bar. "Come and wipe up this mess."

The Patinsky Menace

Outside the closed double door of his suite, Haven found a very depressed Alexis standing on guard.

"There is bad news, master," he announced, as he unlocked the doors, and, following Haven into the room, turned on the taps of the bath. "The police have been here this afternoon. They sent for me. They sent also for Paul and Ivan. They discovered from our passports that we had borne arms for the Tsar and were only released for special service in the household of His Highness."

"Well, what was their trouble?" Haven asked, as he began to undress.

Alexis shook his head sadly. "They said that the little master had no longer need of protection under present conditions, that we had fulfilled our mission, and that if he had enemies it was a matter for the police. Foreign soldiers, or foreigners who have borne arms for their country, are being cleared out of Warsaw. The Police Commissary was a humane man, but he told us—all three—that he must make a report to the military, and that, without a doubt, we should be forced to return to Russia."

Haven reflected for a few minutes.

"I couldn't have taken you much farther, anyway, could I, Alexis?" he pointed out consolingly.

"His Highness' orders were," Alexis declared, "that we should not leave you until you were in safety. This is not safety. Pat-insky must be free by this time. He may arrive tonight. At least he will be in a place from which he can telephone to the authorities. Then, unless the master has left Warsaw, there will be great trouble."

Haven tried to appear more cheerful than he felt.

"You got me out of Russia—that was the most important thing. I couldn't possibly have reached here without you. As to Patinsky—my word will count for something against his, surely? He tried to rob me while on military duty. If he has any sense, he will keep his mouth shut."

"He is a cunning and a bad man," Alexis said sorrowfully. "Against us he will certainly make a charge, and the word of a civilian or of a common soldier against an officer goes for little."

"Then you are best out of the way," Haven decided. "I can deal with that Patinsky affair all right."

"His Highness' orders were that we were to see you to safety," Alexis repeated doggedly.

Haven smiled.

"Well, I ought to be in safety here. Warsaw is a civilized city and I'm not looking for any more trouble at the present. You can't fight the whole Polish army, Alexis, if they insist upon your going back to Russia."

"Has the master any plans?"

"Not yet," Haven acknowledged. "It isn't easy to move anywhere. My own people seem powerless. They made just the offer I feared they would. They will accept my papers, give me an official discharge for them, and allow me to stay at the embassy?"

"The little master did not accept?"

"Naturally I did not. But there may be some trouble about it. Nearly everybody at the legation is senior to me and I have an idea that they're thinking of ordering me to hand over my wallet. In that case, the Russian government, such as it is, would claim what there was to be claimed and you can't tell—they might decide to give up the jewels."

"The little master has been able to procure money?"

"Not as much as I should have liked," Haven confessed. "Plenty to be going on with, though. The banks here all seem to have the wind up. They think that Poland is going to strike out for herself and I dare say they're right. I can't get over an uneasy feeling about this hotel, either, Alexis. I feel as though I were being watched all the time."

"His Highness used to say that this city was always the headquarters of international spies," Alexis confessed. "So long as Paul, Ivan and I are here, the little master is safe from criminals and thieves. If they send us away, the little master must leave the country—it does not matter how—but he must leave it."

MOUNT ALBERT WILL CELEBRATE FIFTY YEARS WED

Mr. and Mrs. George Feasby have returned home after spending the winter with their daughter, Mrs. Risebrough at Sandford, and will be at home to their friends on Saturday, March 9, from 2 until 5 o'clock and from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, it being their 50th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Roy Baxter of Calgary is a visitor this week at the home of her cousin, Mr. W. R. Steeper.

Mrs. J. Cook, Misses Marian and Evelyn Cook, and Mr. Bob Young, of Woodbridge, were guests of Mrs. D. Cook on Saturday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Cook and daughter, Eldred, of Orillia, were at the home of Mrs. Cook's mother, Mrs. H. Ross, on Sunday last.

A group of the members of the Women's Institute gave a very enjoyable euchre in the new hall on Wednesday of last week. There were 36 tables of euchre and one of croquinolet and after lunch was served, they spent the remainder of the evening in old-time dancing.

The prizewinners for the evening were Mrs. H. Broderick and Mrs. H. Harmon for first and second in the ladies, and Jas. Spiroff and Percy Walker for first and second in the men, and Mrs. R. Davis for croquinolet. They all say they had such a nice time that they would like another soon.

Master George Haight was taken to the Hospital for Sick Children on Monday, where he will be for a week or so for observation.

Mr. H. Leadbetter has been in Toronto this week taking a short course in his line of business.

Mrs. Woodcock of Markham spent several days last week at the home of her brother, Mr. H. Leadbetter.

The Young People's Union held their weekly meeting on Monday evening. This was in the form of a St. Patrick's social, with the Keswick society as guests.

A most interesting devotional program was presented by the visitors. After many enjoyable contests, a delightful lunch was served by the local union.

The Mount Albert Women's Institute held their March meeting at the home of Mrs. C. Rollins, with a large attendance. It was a health and child welfare meeting and Mrs. H. Leek gave a splendid demonstration and talk on bandaging. Mrs. Stiver gave a reading and Miss Margaret Ross gave a splendid Irish selection. Marion Stewart and Janet Boag played instrumentals on the piano and Mrs. Steeper sang an Irish song.

A collection was taken up for the Queen Mary cot at Western hospital and splendid reports given of the two evenings of cards and dancing in the hall, when a good sum was realized for the two groups.

their way from Florida to their home in the west.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hillaby and Douglas spent Sunday in Toronto with Mr. and Mrs. S. Bonner.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Evans of Union St. and Mrs. Thos. Collins spent Sunday in Toronto with friends and visited Miss Joyce Collins, who is ill in the Toronto General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Alan Shaw and Robert spent Sunday in Toronto with friends.

Mrs. F. Palmateer spent Tuesday in Toronto.

Mrs. W. Davidson and Mrs. L. Ledrew visited in Toronto this week.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. R. Wiegelt, who celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary on March 9.

Mrs. Fred McKill is spending a few days in Toronto this week with her daughter, Mrs. F. Hitchcock.

The service at the United church last Sunday night was enjoyed by all who were present. Next Sunday the service will be held at the usual time, 7:30 p.m. Sunday-school is at 10:30 a.m. Everyone is welcome at both services.

On Saturday next, March 19, the United church Sunday-school is planning a supper for the pupils. The younger ones are to be at the hall at 2:30 p.m. for games.

An illustrated travelogue, "Here and there in Ireland" will be given by Rev. A. J. Forte, in the township hall, on Wednesday evening, March 23, at 8 o'clock. Everybody is welcome.

Miss May Stevens of the Toronto Bible College spent the weekend at her home here.

Prof. and Mrs. C. E. Dankert of Hanover, New Hampshire, sailed on March 9 on the Queen Mary for a four months' trip abroad, spending half the time on the continent and the remainder touring England and Scotland. They previously spent a month visiting Mrs. Dankert's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brown at Sharon.
